“ My mom was not just a mom, she was a force. I remember so vividly how she would go to work and I knew how much her salary was. But we never wanted for anything. She loved playing those old records and 8 track tapes while either teaching me a new dance, or crying herself to sleep because love had done her wrong that day. She stood strong. she was independent, and most of all giving. I used to wonder how parents could love their children so much, I didn't get it till I was grown and looked over at the aging spitfire next to me and realized that was the love of my life. That woman I call Mama.
