“Debby, I remember you oh so well from high school. You were the older and wiser sister of my best friend (Dale) and my "High School Little Sister" Jodi. I used to hang out at y'all house ALL the time. I knew and loved your dad, your mom, Rusty and all of you too! I will always remember my senior year with Dale when I found out your dad had passed. He was absolutely the kindest, nicest man I may have ever met. He was suffering, which was so foreign to me, yet he would laugh with us silly teenagers and always greeted us with a big smile! Your mom would fuss at us with a big smile on her face and make us leave the room so she could take care of your dad! She had every reason to complain, yet she was so upbeat! I had the utmost respect for your mom too! I kind of knew it back then, but maybe not as much as I do now, just how blessed I was to be a part of this kind and loving family. When I read about the awesome woman you were in your adult life, I know we could also have been close friends. Eternal rest grand unto you, Debby! I wish I could have given you a big hug before you left this earth, but I'm sending you a big heavenly hug now! My deepest sympathies to Debby and all those she loved!”

“ Debby,

Even though I was the “yankee” and you were the “rebel”, and we lived states apart, I always felt you were closer to me as a sister than a cousin. I always enjoyed our visits to one another; I always had so much fun with you. We even named our daughters the same —yes, you claimed the name first as you always reminded me. I will miss our phone calls to one another. You were always there to cheer me on when I was down. I know you can now breathe easy and I will see you again in eternity. You were, and are, loved.

“ Deb, What can I say, You were always there for me all my life, when I marry David, when I lost Channing, even at the end you would call to see if I was ok, tell me to take my Ned's, see if I ate or did I slept. You were always the big sister. I love and miss you.

“ Deb, I will miss our times together watching cooking shows, shopping online, telling stories, laughing at how I am directionally challenged, talking about our family memories with Mom and Dad, and did I say shopping?? My heart is heavy from my loss but I know you are happy dancing with Dad, walking with Joey, and playing cards with Grandma. Thank you for your love and guidance all my life. Love you forever!
