“ I tell myself everyday it’s a dream and I’ll wake up and he will be there with his amazing smile and those dimples. I know your struggles all too well and the only comfort is that you are at peace. And all those unanswered questions that plagued you are answered. You fought a good fight and I know you were ready. My brother, no matter what was going on was there for his little sister to pull me out of every stupid thing I did. You saved my life more than once when it was your life and your heart that should have been spared. You always had the words to say. Mostly, “well nelle ive done worse.” I love you and miss you and I hope one day you can forgive me for failing you because you never failed me
