“ It's been the hardest 4 years of my life. A mother should never have to bury a child. To have one ripped from your life at the hands of another person is even worse. It's been 4 years and things about your murder have only gotten more questionable. My last promise I ever made to you was that I would find out what really happened that lead to your death and I believe I'm getting closer to the truth as time passes. I'll continue my search for answers for as long as I live if I have to but I will have closure and you will finally be able to rest in peace. I love you, my son. Until we meet again.
